THE COUNTY FAIR NOW ON AT LOUISA

Attractions for Friday and Saturday are to be Especially Good

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week are the dates for the county fair at Louisa. Thursday has been unfavorable because of rain, which interfered greatly with the attendance. With good weather on Friday and Saturday the prospects are fine for a large attendance. The committee has everything ready and has arranged some good attractions outside of the displays of products.

Balloon Ascensions.
One of the features is a balloonist who has been brought here to make ascensions each day. This will be quite a sight for the local populace, as it is the first time such an exhibition has been given here.

Frae Shows For Children.
The Eldorado moving picture show will admit all school children of Lawrence and Wayne free on Saturday. The pictures will include Gen. Pershing and the United States soldiers landing in France.

Woman's Department.
In the Garret store room opposite the courthouse the women have a very fine display. The Red Cross workers are there also. Don't fail to visit this place.

CONSUMPTIVES SHOULD AVOID TOBACCO AND LIQUOR

Dr. Hadden, medical director and superintendent of the Agnes Memorial Sanatorium, Denver, is so sure of the deleterious effects of tobacco on tuberculous patients, either in smoking or chewing that if the patient persists in their use after his attention has been called to the rule he is dismissed from the institution. Tuberculous people should make a note of this and shun the use of the weed which has been shown to be so detrimental to improvement and cure. Tuberculosis is a disease that exhausts vital energy and anything that weakens this depletion should be rigorously discarded. This is why the use of liquor is prohibited as all dissipation tends to aid the progress of the deadly disease unless arrested. Absolute relaxation and rest of mind and body, fresh air, sunshine, nutritious food, cleanliness and cheerfulness are indispensable requisites in the treatment of the disease and those who have paid diligent attention to them have as a general thing felt the delight of improvement. As consumption is slow in developing it is also slow of cure. The patient must rid himself of the idea that he can be cured in a short time. It may take months and it may take years, therefore "do not weary in well doing for in due season you shall reap if ye faint not," we have the Bible for authority. If you would learn more of the treatment that has proven so efficacious, write to Dr. W. L. Helder, Secretary of the State Tuberculosis Commission, Frankfort, for pamphlets giving full instructions.

Two Beantiful Catlettsburg Girls are to have a Double Wedding

The following from the Lexington Herald is of interest to many of our readers. Mr. and Mrs. Flanery, now of Catlettsburg, were prominent citizens of Pikeville several years.

The announcement of the engagement and approaching wedding of Miss Merle Flanery to Mr. Davis M. Hawerton, and of Miss Dawn Flanery to Mr. H. Miss Dawn Flanery was a student of the University of Kentucky the year before last and during her stay here her sister, Miss Merle Flanery, was her guest at Patterson Hall. Both are very attractive and talented and they have planned their wedding for the latter part of November, but full details have not yet been announced.

Mr. Hawerton is a prominent young lawyer of Catlettsburg, now in the Attorney General's office at Frankfort, and he and his bride will make their home there.

A LAWRENCE BOY WRITES FROM CAMP ZACHARY TAYLOR

September 23, 1917.
Big Sandy News,
Louisa, Kentucky.

To the people of Big Sandy, Ladies and Gentlemen:—The Louisa boys arrived at Camp Taylor about 8 o'clock and can say we found it different to what we thought it was. The boys all say if they had known what they do now they would have been here long ago and for myself I know I would have been here I realize there is slim chance when we cross over, but I like this, some one will have to go and it had as well be me as any one else. As for myself I'm anxious to cross over and go after the Kaiser, and the rest of the Louisa boys seem to have the same "pep" in them I have. As for old Lawrence county's boys, there is nothing lacking as to "pep," and the rest of the Kentucky boys seem to appear well. In regard to the rest of the States represented here I can't say so much for I'm not very well acquainted with them.

We boys have always heard that drafted men didn't get good treatment, but I can straighten that out. I never met better men than our officers, we get good food and plenty of it. We have a soldier's home of about seven miles square. We are allowed to go over the town on Wednesday and Saturdays and Sundays and we get a pass to go to Louisville most any time during these vacations. Our drill hasn't been very hard yet and they tell us it won't be very hard. We boys have lots of fun during our vacations. We can tell the people something when we return.

I don't really think there is as much danger here as at home for they have vaccinated me twice and say that's only a start, and a man's liable to get snake bit in old Kentucky. But it's home and we Kentucky boys love our mountain country. You'll hear from us boys again soon.

ALEX LACKEY FRAZIER,

WM. CARTER SHOT BY DR. R. C. MOORE

Tragedy Occurred in Louisa Last Night
Wound is Probably Fatal

Mr. Wm. Carter, age about 45 was shot at five o'clock yesterday evening in Louisa by Dr. R. C. Moore, veterinary surgeon. The ball entered his left side just below the heart and the wound is expected to be fatal. He is in River-view hospital and his death is expected at any time. Dr. Moore was refused bond and placed in jail.

The shooting occurred at the door of Moore's office when Carter started to enter. It is said they had some trouble in the office a few minutes before.

If the reports are true the tragedy is explained by one familiar word—whisky—one of mankind's greatest curses, responsible for 90 per cent of the homicides.

The men are relatives. Carter was a brother to John H. Carter, former Sheriff of Lawrence-co.

SAVE THE FOOD SUPPLIES.

Seven years ago a famous European student of history prophesied that the next great war of the future would not be won by fighting but by famine. We are to-day fighting that war, and famine is indeed threatening to be its ally.

The men of England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Italy, and Belgium—our allies—are fighting; they are not on the farms. The production of food by these countries has therefore been greatly reduced. Even before the war it was much less than the amount consumed. The difference came from large quantities from other countries than from America. Now this difference is greater than ever, and, at the same time, supplies can no longer come from most of the other countries. They must now come from America. Therefore, our allies depend on us for food as they have never depended before, and they ask us for it with a right which they have never had before. For to-day they are doing the fighting, the suffering and dying—in our war.

We must send them the food they have to have. We will send it. But we can only do it by a wise and loyal economy of food on the part of every one of us. We must stimulate our food production, organize our food handling, eliminate all the waste possible, substitute as largely as possible other foods for wheat, beef, pork, dairy products, and sugar and reduce consumption where it is excessive.

To accomplish these things is the problem of the United States Food Administration. But this accomplishment can come only from the combined personal and voluntary service of all the people of the land. To that end we want all the people to join the Food Administration. No fees or dues; merely a promise to help. Send for our membership pledge and our plan. UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION, Washington, D. C.

A WARNING TO THE DRAFTED MEN

Must be Ready on Short Notice to Reach their County Seat

The NEWS is requested by the Local Board to call attention to the fact that all drafted men are under military law, which is very strict, and especially in time of war. If any should fail to appear when called they will have to be reported and perhaps subjected to a military trial. It is the desire of the Local Board to keep the boys out of trouble, and to do this they should keep in daily touch with their postoffice.

Help The Boys Along.

One young man who went away to the army with the first call walked 15 miles to Louisa. He was too poor to hire a horse. It is an unfavorable reflection upon any community to permit such things to happen to the youths who are putting their lives on the altar of their country. We are sure the neighbors did not know of this or they would gladly have brought him in. Let every community get ready to do this. These boys are worthy of the best attention we can give them.

It is probably the next call of about 25 men from Lawrence county will be on October 3, or thereabouts.

MT. ZION.

We are very sorry to say that we haven't had any Sunday school at this place for three Sundays but are trusting that it will start again soon.

The revival meeting at Tyree has closed.

There are four cases of typhoid fever at Joe White's.

Mrs. Leva Riddle and family of Kenova, W. Va., are visiting her mother at this place.

Mrs. Nellie Kirk of Louisa is here visiting home folks.

Everybody is very busy preparing to make sorghum.

We are expecting church here Saturday night before the first Sunday in October. Hope the preacher will come, as there were many folks disappointed at the last meeting time.

Ruby Clay, who has been at Louisa for some time, is back again.

BARRELS

To the people who have contracted with us for sorghum, we now have your barrels ready for delivery. If your wagon should be in take them out now. We will make no charge at present for the barrels and you can pay when sorghum is delivered. We are adopting this method so that there will be no shortage of barrels.

We have a large amount of barrels to supply our customers but for your convenience, take them out in ample time.

Remember, we can handle every barrel of sorghum that we can get. Cash will be paid, correct weight, prompt service.

The Lobaco Co.

PASS ALONG THE SMOKE

YOU warm-hearted people of Lawrence county won't let the men who are fighting your fight go smoke-hungry.

Not a bit of it. You're going to see to it that they get all the tobacco they need—just as the folks back home in England and France are taking care of the smokers for Tommy and Bob.

It isn't much to do—considering. A dollar or a quarter from you that gives a little comfort to one of your own flesh and blood doesn't stack up to much alongside the fact that the very man you are befriending may have to give up his life.

But it's a regular thing to do—and you "regular" men and women will do it.

This is the way. Fill in that coupon below, put it in an envelope together with all you can afford to give and drop it in the nearest box now, addressed to BIG SANDY NEWS.

TOBACCO FUND

Our paper has joined The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times in this most worthy undertaking.

Approved by the Secretaries of War and Navy, the management of this fund buys its tobacco at cost—every contribution of 25 cents means 45 to 50 cents' worth of tobacco for the man out there. No one profits but the fighting man—rents, postage, advertising are all contributed and the soldier who gets your tobacco will send you a postal telling how much it meant to him.

There's no argument here. Just put your name on that blank line and pass along the smoke.

FREE SPEECH DEFINED

Illinois Senator Rebukes the Pacifist Propagandists.

Says They Betrayed Own Land, Betrayed Own Fellow-Citizens and Surrendered Country.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Replying to the German reply to the Pope's peace proposal, Senator Lewis of Illinois, the Democratic whip of the Senate, declared in a vigorous speech that no peace is possible until America has achieved all her war aims. He assailed German pacifism and delivered a stinging rebuke to the pacifist propagandists, declaring they are "betraying their own land, betraying their own fellow-citizens, and surrendering their own country."

"Who are they in America that demand the right to argue against this war of America?" he said. "Who are those who ask to debate the righteousness of their own country? To dispute the honor of their own men and question the virtue of their own women? Who are those who demand to denounce their country's cause while they praise the purpose of her destroyers? Who are those who cry for 'constitutional free speech' to defoul their own land, betray their own citizens, and surrender their own country? Let us now reply to all those, saying—yes, your country guarantees free speech to every American, but that man who uses free speech against America is not the man to whom free speech is guaranteed. In this land there can be no free speech to any man who destroys the freedom of his fellow-men. There can never be liberty of speech to an American citizen to destroy the liberty of the American nation. Let this meaning of our constitution be now proclaimed, as fixed to all mankind."

YOUR WIFE CAN USE IT.

If you are away from home and one of your horses takes the collar your wife can treat him if she has Farris' Colic Remedy in the house. It is easy to use. Just drop it on the horse's tongue and in thirty minutes he is relieved. Get it today. You may need it tomorrow. For Sale By All Good Dealers.

UNITED STATES EXPOSES HUGE GERMAN PLOTS

Von Bernstorff Revealed as Head of Intrigues in This Country.

SPY NET COVERED NATION

Kaiser's Representatives Paid for Blowing Up Merchant Ships Leaving New York—Irish Revolt Aided—Other Secret Activities Told.

The following exposure of Germany's espionage and desperate activity in America is possibly the most startling made since the first declaration of war in August, 1914. It is based on official documents held by the United States government which have not hitherto been made available to the press.

(By the Committee on Public Information.)

Washington, Sept. 25.—Within a few days a German newspaper published in this country employed as the headline to an article dealing with a rumor of German-American disaffection in this country the derisive legend, "Lieb! Vaterland, ungetrubt ruhe!" This is, of course, a parody on the refrain of "Die Wacht am Rhein," the German national hymn.

"Lieb! Vaterland, ungetrubt ruhe!" "Loved fatherland, be restful (or undisturbed)."

In the parody it carries a sneer comprehensible only to one who understands the German mode of speech and thought.

Type of German Propaganda.

Of itself the instance is slight. But it typifies a certain important phase of the German propaganda which subtly but persistently seeks to present Germany's course in America in the most favorable light, even to the extent of defending the improper activities of the Teutonic diplomatic representatives before their passports were given them.

Because of this continuing propaganda certain documents in the possession of the department of justice now assume peculiar importance, in that they prove undeniably the intimate relations between the accredited representatives of the Kaiser in the United States and plotters against the laws and the security of this country, whose enterprise did not fall short of projected wholesale destruction of life and property.

Curious Chapter in History of War.

Such of these documents as were essential to legal proceedings brought against the Germans have been published. Others are here made public for the first time. They form a curious, if disjointed, chapter in the diplomatic history of the war.

In the fall of 1914, when the German plots against Canada were fomented in this country there was established at 60 Wall street an "advertising" office, presided over by a big, suave man of Teutonic aspect named Wolf von Igel.

There were two peculiar features about this office. One was that it was frequented during two years of singularly quiet and unobtrusive existence chiefly by Germans who had nothing whatsoever to do with advertising. The other was a large safe, bearing the insignia of the German imperial government.

Von Igel Defies U. S. Agents.

To this office there came one morning in April, 1916, while Von Igel was preparing a mass of papers which he had taken from the safe for transfer to the German embassy in Washington, four United States secret service agents from the department of justice, who made their way past the guardians always on duty, put Von Igel under arrest and undertook to seize the papers.

The German was large, powerful and brave. With the aid of one associate he stubbornly fought the officers, striving to rescue the papers, to close the safe, to get to the telephone and communicate with his superiors. Revolvers were drawn by the secret service men. They produced no effect upon the intrepid Von Igel.

"This is German territory," he shouted. "Shoot me and you will bring on war."

There was no shooting. But after a protracted struggle the defenders were overpowered and the papers seized.

Find Proof Plot Was Laid.

When the papers were examined by the department of justice the reason for Von Igel's determined fight became apparent. Here in the form of letters, telegrams, notations, checks, receipts, ledgers, cashbooks, cipher codes, lists of spies, and other memoranda and records, were found indications—in some instances of vague nature, in others of the most damning conclusiveness—that the German imperial government, through its representatives in this friendly nation, was concerned with—

Violation of laws of the United States.

Destruction of lives and property in merchant vessels on the high seas.

Irish revolutionary plots against Great Britain.

Fomenting ill-feeling against the United States in Mexico.

Subornation of American writers and lecturers.

Financing of propaganda.

Maintenance of a spy system under the guise of a commercial investigation bureau.

Subsidizing of a bureau for the purpose of stirring up labor troubles in munition plants.

The bomb industry and other related activities.

Briefly, Germany's spy plots against the United States, as made public by committee on public information, are as follows:

In the fall of 1914, shortly after the outbreak of the war, the German embassy established a publicity department at 60 Wall street, under the direction of Wolf von Igel. About two years later this office was raided and documentary proof obtained that Wolf von Igel was the chief spy and plotter of a vast system maintained in the United States under Ambassador von Bernstorff's general direction.

Paul Koenig, pretending to conduct the secret service of the Hamburg-American Steamship company from a New York office, was discovered to be in reality one of the directors of the German spy system in the United States. He is now interned at Fort Oglethorpe. In Von Bernstorff's code he was known as "XXX."

In a report by Koenig to his boss, Captain von Papen of the German embassy, Koenig describes an agent who has made bombs to resemble lumps of coal to be placed on board merchantmen sailing from New York for the purpose of blowing them up while at sea.

James F. J. Archibald, magazine writer and war correspondent, acknowledged receipt of $5,000 from the German embassy for propaganda work. Edwin Emerson, another correspondent, got $1,000.

John Devoy of New York city, professional Irish patriot, and now editor of the Gaelic-American, was the native agent of Germany in this country in promoting the recent revolution in Ireland. He was the go-between for Bernstorff and Sir Roger Casement, executed for treason by the British government. Devoy handled a check for $1,000 from the German embassy for Casement.

Daniel F. Cohalan, justice of the New York supreme court, asked the German embassy to telegraph to Berlin advice on the Irish revolution, as "the services of this revolution may decide the war."

The Chicago branch of the German and Austro-Hungarian Labor Information and Relief bureau was active in promoting labor disorder. Dr. Max Niven of Chicago received $60 for the "labor fund."

Completeness of the German spy system was due to loyalty to the Kaiser of Americans of German extraction who were willing to betray the country of their adoption.

Canada was also the object of German conspirators operating in the United States under the direction of the German embassy. There were unsuccessful plots to destroy the Welland canal and to accomplish the separation of Canada from the British empire.

G. S. Viereck, editor of the Fatherland, now changed in title (but not in purpose) to Vireck's Weekly, offered help in supplying picric acid, a constituent of many high explosives.

William J. Ruff of Quincy, Ill., wanted to help "save lives" by providing the Germans with a device to blow up trenches and destroy ships.

Ray Beveridge, Californian artist, received $3,000 from the German embassy for a pro-German lecture tour, masquerading in part as a Red Cross feature.

Bernstorff's staff was busy also with promoting the transportation of munitions through Holland, supposedly a neutral.

Wolf von Igel's spy system produced a secret code message April 11, 1916, to this effect: "Herewith respectfully send an extract regarding troops stationed in California and the armament of the coast fortifications."

PLAN SCHOOLS AT KY. CANTONMENT

EFFORTS OF ILLITERACY COMMISSION WILL NOT BE FRUITLESS, 'TIS ANNOUNCED.

OTHER CAMPS MAY FOLLOW

All Illiterates at Federal Camp Zachary Taylor Will Be Compelled to Attend Y. M. C. A. Schools—Books Will Be Provided.

—Frankfort.

As a result of the agitation by the State Illiteracy Commission for the eradication of illiteracy from the draft army, it is probable that Camp Zachary Taylor will set a pace in education for the other cantonments of the country.

Il. V. McChesney, in charge of the educational and entertainment work for the Y. M. C. A. at Camp Zachary Taylor, said the commanding officer, has decided to require every illiterate to go to the school to be conducted by the Y. M. C. A.

Mrs. Corn Wilson Stewart, chairman of the Illiteracy Commission, is co-operating with Mr. McChesney and will use part of the fund being raised for the Soldiers' Moonlight Schools to provide books and equipment for the army schools.

Mrs. Stewart said that any agency striving effectively to eradicate illiteracy will receive the whole-hearted support and encouragement of the commission and this work in the cantonment is furthering the cause; since the illiterate soldiers usually come from illiterate families and their instruction is the entering wedge for the enlightenment of the whole household.

With the work the commission is inaugurating next month, it is probable that not a single illiterate will be found in the second draft.

There are quite a number of Moonlight school teachers now at Camp Zachary Taylor and they probably will help instruct the men.

Actions Were Misunderstood.

Philip G. Russell, formerly field man for the State Geological Survey, was caught "red handed" mapping the country near East Bernstadt, Laurel county, for an oil company and apprehended for a German spy a few days ago, according to a report reaching the department.

Mr. Russell's mysterious actions, coupled with his close-clipped mustache, still more closely clipped down East dialect and dark complexion, evidently made him a marked man in the community.

He telephoned to the house, where he has roomed while here to get some one to identify him, and in this way the story of his detention got out. Mr. Russell left the department some time ago and returned to his home at New Haven, Conn., where he made application for the officers' training camp, but lost out on weight.

On his return to Kentucky, like most of the other geological field men, he entered the employment of oil men. He is a Yale graduate, Col. James Andrew Scott, of Frankfort, afterwards called up officers of East Bernstadt and was informed that Mr. Russell had been released.

Not to Control Seed Wheat.

Farmers in Kentucky may sell their seed wheat for more than $2.20 the bushel, the government wheat price, providing there is no evidence of extortion. For several days Commissioner of Agriculture Mgt. S. Cohen has been endeavoring to settle the seed wheat question, and has just received the following telegram from Edward M. Fleish, of St. Louis, head of the Grain Corporation Association, a subsidiary of the government board in charge of the food and wheat situation:

"It is not the intention of the Food Administration to interfere with or try to control private arrangements between the farmer and those from whom he secures his supply of seed wheat, except in cases where such arrangements shows extortion. Same will be considered as hampering the nation's food supply."

Compensation Is Allowed.

Three death claims have been allowed by the State Workmen's Compensation Board. Dependents of Thomas B. Clarke, Jr., killed by a locomotive at the Ashland Iron & Mining Co. plant, January 1, receive $4 the week for 335 weeks; the family of William Eckert, killed when thrown from the mast of a derrick at the Louisville pumping station, July 17, receive $12 the week.

Eckert was employed by the Missouri Bridge & Iron Co. The mother and sister of Robert Craighead, killed by falling down an elevator shaft at the Mengel box factory, August 21, receive $1 per week. They reside at Guthrie.

Army Wants Foresters.

Kentucky woodmen and millworkers are wanted for the 20th Engineers, a forestry regiment, and applications for enlistment may be made to State Forester J. E. Barton, at Frankfort. The United States army recruiting officers have been instructed by the Adjutant General to accept men for enlistment who have been in used recruiting cards by listing officers. They also have authority to accept others properly qualified in their opinion for enlistment in the regiment.

Governor Stanley has issued a regulation for the extradition from Indianapolis of George Hornung, wanted in Louisville on a charge of child desertion.

Governor Stanley, by proclamation, fixed Sunday, October 14, as "Good Roads Day." He called on the ministers of the state and other public-spirited citizens to avail themselves of the occasion to impress upon the people the need of better roads. He urged the importance of their hearty cooperation in this work.

Governor Stanley says that, "whereas the present conditions render the construction and maintenance of public highways necessary alike to our domestic prosperity and national defense, it is of prime importance that popular attention be called to the wisdom of a concerted and organized effort to extend our system of public roads, also to co-ordinate them with interstate thoroughfares and to preserve them by capable and scientific management in the highest attainable state of efficiency."

Rodman Wiley, road commissioner for the state, sent a letter to every minister and public man in the state urging them to cooperate in an effort to arouse public interest in better roads.

Open State Headquarters.

Democratic State headquarters will be opened in Louisville next week with Dr. T. H. Welch, of Nicholasville, chairman, and Senator Seiden R. Glenn, of Middlesboro, as secretary in charge. Besides the chairman and secretary the campaign committee will be composed of one member from each appellate district. The members are Judge Voris Gregory, Mayfield, First District; General E. H. Combs, Lexington, Fifth District; Clarence Wood, Mayaville, Sixth District; Dr. R. R. Collier, West Liberty, Seventh District.

A ROMAN SCARFPIN

It Started a Romance

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

My grandfather was a sporty old gentleman and at sixty-three was as marked in his attentions to the ladies as a young man of twenty-five. And there was something about him that drew the fair sex to him. I have seen a girl of twenty-five gladly leave a young man of twenty-five to chat with the old gentleman, very much to the younger one's dissatisfaction. I liked to hear him tell his escapades, and one day he related the following story:

When I was a young man a railroad train was a very different conveyance from what it is now. There were no sleeping or parlor cars, the coupling was the old method—by means of a pin and link, permitting the cars to swing from side to side—and, as for lights, there were nothing but lanterns. When a train passed through a tunnel these lanterns were left unlighted and the passengers in darkness.

I was traveling one day on one of these loosely bound together trains—I think I was nineteen years old at the time—when I had an adventure which influenced my whole life. On the opposite side of the car, several seats before me, sat a very pretty girl. She had a mouth that can only be described as kissable. I would have defied any one who saw it to refrain from wanting to kiss those vermilion lips.

At any rate, as soon as I saw them I was seized with a desire to kiss them, and the oftener I looked at them the stronger became the inclination. We had traveled in the same coach for several hours when suddenly the train shot into a tunnel.

The moment we were left in darkness an idea popped into my head. It was to go across the aisle and kiss those lips. I knew the tunnel and that a train required several minutes to pass through it. I would have what time I needed. The girl would not know who had kissed her. She might suspect me, but she would not be certain that I was the aggressor, and I had confidence in my ability to look innocent.

I arose from my seat, counted three seats forward by putting my hand on their backs and sought the girl by feeling for her. My hand touched her sleeve. I bent forward, brushed my face against hers till my lips met hers and took what, under the circumstances, might be called a reasonably long kiss.

I expected a shriek, but beyond a not overloud expression of surprise, which was drowned by the rattle of the train, there was no comment on my audacity. As soon as I had gratified my desire—every one knows how sweet is a stolen kiss—I retreated to my seat, and when the train left the tunnel my head was resting on the back of my seat, and I was in a pletore of innocent slumber.

After a few minutes I opened my eyes, yawned, looked out of the window and then about me. The girl was quietly reading a novel she had been perusing when the train entered the tunnel. I was pleased that she did not appear disturbed. Her lips looked more kissable than ever, and I wished the whole journey were in a tunnel and I could repeat what I had done ad infinitum.

A young man is particular as to the set of his neckwear, and I passed my hand over my scarf to make sure that it had not disarranged it while stealing the kiss.

My scarfpin was missing. Here was something on which I had not counted. The pin was a gift and a valuable one, a mosaic my mother had brought from the Eternal City. I knew that I had lost it while taking the kiss and had probably dropped it on the seat occupied by the girl or on the floor at her feet. But to look for it there would be a dead giveaway. What should I do? I braced it out by making a search for the pin where I had lost it? I dared not.

In those days at the end of the car were a water cooler and a tin cup. I arose from my seat, walked slowly forward to the cooler, took a drink of water, turned and went back to my seat. As I passed the girl I glanced on the vacant part of the seat on which she sat and on the floor beside her, hoping to see my pin. It was not in sight. On my return trip I cast a momentary glance at the girl. She was reading her novel and did not look up. There was a suspicion of an amused look about those kissable lips.

Of course my examination of the seat and the floor was by no means thorough. I hoped the girl would leave the train before it reached my stopping place. This would give me an opportunity to make a satisfactory search for my pin. But we passed station after station without her making a move. Then came my stopping place. Should I give up my pin or go on till the girl left the train? I concluded to go on.

When the conductor came through the train after I left my stopping place and saw me still sitting there he stood stock still. This in itself was embarrassing. I bought a ticket to a point about twenty miles ahead. The girl, for some unexplained reason, turned and looked my way. There was the same suspicious look in her eye. The latter might have meant amusement, triumph or tantalization.

We rode on together for another ten miles, when the girl began to gather her belongings. Thank heaven, she was preparing to alight! True enough, when the next station, Tallbotsville, was announced by the brakeman the young lady arose from her seat and moved to the door. She had scarcely reached it before I changed my seat for the one she had left and begun my search.

I looked on the seat. I looked on the floor. I lit a match to see better while hunting beneath. No pin was to be seen. I examined the aisle between the seat I had occupied and that on which the girl had sat. I was doomed to disappointment.

I now suspected that she had my pin. I left the train at the next station, took a cab and rode back to Tallbotsville. There I visited the two newspaper offices of the place and left an advertisement at each stating that a mosaic scarfpin had been lost on a certain train and the finder would be properly rewarded for its return; no questions asked. Then I went to my home, having left instructions at the offices of the papers to send me any replies that might come for me.

A couple of days later I received a letter signed Julia Waterman stating that she had found a mosaic scarfpin on the train mentioned. As to "no questions asked," the finder of the pin would ask the questions. She would return the pin without reward after the loser had explained how he came to lose it.

My suspicion of an amused smile was now explained. The girl had had my pin all the while I was looking for it. It was evident that I must confess. I wrote Miss Waterman that no girl with such kissable lips should be permitted to travel on any train that passed through a tunnel, for they offered an irresistible temptation. I was quite willing to give my pin, though it was a gift from my dear mother, for the kiss I had taken. It grew sweeter each day in my memory. If she would accept the one in lieu of the other I would consider the account closed.

The next day I recovered my scarfpin by express and a note saying that the writer had no kisses to dispose of in exchange for anything. She reserved the right to give her kisses to whomsoever she might choose. Not another word did she write. There was no demand for an apology or for a confession from me that I had committed a wrong. What I didn't like about it was that it closed the incident.

Now, I did not propose that it should be closed. I wished to form the young lady's acquaintance with a view to getting another kiss. One more? No; a dozen. A dozen? No; a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand. But how reopen the matter? I must invent some plan. Almost any plan would do, provided the young lady would be pleased to make my acquaintance. No plan would suffice if she desired that the matter be dropped. In other words, I might be the gainer by pushing on, and if I did not push on I would certainly be a loser.

I wrote her that I would be glad to expiate my robbery by giving her my scarfpin, but since she would not accept it in exchange for what I had taken, I would be only too glad to donate it or its value to any charity she might designate. This would not be disposing of the kiss for her own benefit, but for the relief of the needy. With this note I sent the scarfpin. The offer without the pin would have been useless. By sending the pin I forced her to take another step.

When a woman gives way to a persistent suitor, she is apt to do so all of a sudden. Miss Waterman replied to my note in a very different vein than before. She wrote me that I had behaved very well in standing for my fault. As to what should be done with the pin, perhaps we had better talk the matter over. She would be pleased to have me call upon her for the purpose on a certain evening.

Napoleon at the battle of Wagram, when he saw a certain maneuver of the enemy, closed his eyelids, considering the battle won. I folded Miss Waterman's note, considering that an acquaintance was effected. No more skulking was needed. On the evening designated I went over to the place of her residence on a train and at 8 o'clock in the evening appeared at her home.

Miss Waterman must have regretted her giving way or considered that an acquaintance formed in such manner was beneath her dignity. At any rate, she held me at some distance. This did not trouble me at all. There was plenty of time for it to wear off, and I made no mistake by proceeding too rapidly. She did not remain long on her dignity. She was full of love for adventure, and I had won her good will by my daring. We were soon laughing at the position I had been placed in, and she appeared to enjoy it immensely.

During the kiss in the dark her hand had come in contact with my scarfpin, and she had snatched it out of its place. She had noticed me, as I had noticed her—in fact, as boys and girls notice one another—and had especially admired my Roman scarfpin. When I passed her in the aisle on pretense of getting a glass of water, but really to look for the lost pin, she was brimming over with mischief.

That was half a century ago. That scarfpin never came back to me, but your grandmother gave herself to me in exchange for it. It has descended to your sister, who is the tangle of Julia Waterman when I stole that kiss in the dark.

But in the days of Pullman cars there are no such episodes as there were in unlighted railway trains and stagecoaches. Even the canalboat in those days furnished its quantum of romances.

A PARTY WIRE

By OSCAR COX

My telephone party wire is 684 W. Next door lives a garrulous girl, whose number is 684 M. Eva Trewsdale is her name, and she has a bosom friend, Cora Roberts, with whom she carries on long winded conversations over the wire and always at that hour in the morning when it is most in use. I am a literary man and do my scribbling at home. The other day before sitting down to my day's work I desired to confer with my publishers with reference to the closing of a story written to order on a plan suggested by a member of the firm. Naturally I look to him for instructions as I proceed. On this particular occasion I wished to know whether I should eliminate one of the characters before closing the yarn. I called the publisher's number.

"The line is busy."

I was about to drop the receiver and wait till the line would be free when I heard the well known melodious voice of Miss Trewsdale:

"What are you going to do today, Cora?"

"I don't know. What are you going to do?"

"I don't know either."

"Has Tom H. been to call lately?"

"Not since last week. That horrid Kate W. is making for him. It's too disgusting for anything to see the way she acts when he's around."

I sighed, hung up the receiver, paced the floor for some ten minutes and called again. They were still at it. I listened again at intervals, but the dialogue was still going on. Finally there seemed to be a lull. The operator gave me the number I wanted, and I got Mr. Hathorne, with whom I wished to speak.

"What do you think I'd better do with Dudley?" I asked.

"I think you'd better kill him."

Then followed one of those confused situations that sometimes occur when several persons are trying to use a telephone at the same time.

"Oh, heavens!" It was a woman's voice.

"Is that you, Mary?"

"Yes; some one is planning a murder over this phone. I wonder if I should call the police."

"Please send to Mrs. James B. Wright two pounds of lamb chops, a bunch of celery."

"This wire's busy!" I shouted. "I've got possession of it, and I'm going to keep it till I get through. Keep off everybody. Is that you, Hathorne?"

"Yes; what do you want?"

"I'd like to know before I sit down to work—I've lost three-quarters of an hour—what I'd better do with Dudley?"

"If I were you I would—"

"The lady won't take his food this morning, doctor. What shall I do?"

At this point there was a dead silence.

"Hello!" I cried.

"What number?" came from the operator.

"I was talking just now with 3612. Some one butted in and I've lost him. Can you get him for me again?"

"Is this the police office?"

"Yes, mum. What is it?"

"There is a murder being arranged over the telephone. Some one by the name of Dudley."

"Who's he going to kill, mum?"

"He isn't going to kill any one; he's going to be—"

The speaker was cut off by a click, and I heard a locomotive evidently pulling out of a station. All the voices were hushed. I waited till the train had got away, then belatedly I saw I was wrong, without getting a reply. Then I began to work the arm on which the receiver hangs when not in use. At last the operator asked:

"What number?"

"I want 3612. I had him, but I was cut off by a concourse from the tower of Babel."

Presently there was a click and the query "Well, who is it?" in Hathorne's voice.

"I say, Hathorne, I asked you awhile ago what I should do with Dudley in my story. You suggested that I kill him. If I do that what shall I do with his sweetheart?"

"What's the price of eggs this morning?"

"Seventy-five cents, mum."

"See here, central!" I shouted in a rage. "Can't I get this wire for a few minutes this morning without the whole town hitting in?"

"Time, please."

"Nine fifty-nine."

"Thank you."

"You're welcome."

There was a click, and in a few moments the operator asked again:

"What number?"

I was soon in connection with Hathorne again, and we were debating what should be done with Dudley when there was another, a final, interruption in the voice of the woman who had spotted a murder.

"There you are, Mr. Police Officer. Those men who are going to kill somebody are talking again. I'd know their voices again if I ever heard them."

"Hathorne!" I shouted.

"Well?"

"I'm coming around to your place to talk it over."

"All right. I'll be here till lunch time."

I have directed the telephone company to put in a private wire for me. I've had all I want of a party one. My opinion of party wires is that a man's voice has no place on one of them. They are for women and children and no one else.

A REAL SYMPHONY.

This is a study in browns. The handsome, severely tailored suit is stuff gabardine, the luxuriant stole kolinsky, while the beautiful line of the turban is attained by brown velvet over a chenille base. Brown is a reliable fall color—brown in many shades.

SMALL STYLE.

Little honey wears a fetching coat of king's blue velvet cut on straight lines and belted handsomely, the silver buckle harmonizing beautifully with the gray squirrel edging of the collar and cuffs. The bonnet facing is a new note for a bonnet, and the flowers are made of ribbon.

How Do They Do It?

[The following editorial causes us to stop and think of the enormous burdens of the world leaders of to-day].
It would be a strangely apathetic and indifferent mind which did not often, in these days of mental and spiritual strain, bestow at least a passing thought upon the men whose shoulders are bearing the almost unendurable burdens of this war. If any souls were ever the objects of an honorable compassion, they are theirs. Consider such lives as those which Lloyd George, Poincare, the King of Italy, Venizelos, Kerensky, Woodrow Wilson, Joffre, Foch, Haig and Cadorna are leading! We do not envy them ourselves. It is too much like having to stagger up another hill of Calvary with a heavy cross upon our shoulders—a cross on which we were all but certain to be crucified.

We have read that Kerensky—that youthful miracle of physical, mental and volitional energy (a youth of 33) was heard to sigh that he must work harder! How can he do what he does? Inheritance which was certain to carry him off in a few short years or even days. How could a man "work still harder"? How can he do what he does? From what mysterious regions does he draw that inexhaustible strength? Was there ever a man in all the history of the race who was confronted with more numerous, more complicated and insistent problems than Kerensky? A nation in ruins must be rebuilt in a day! One hundred and eighty millions of people wandering as sheep without a shepherd must be gathered into the fold before the evening shadows fall. A depleted treasury, a mutinous army, a constituency split into innumerable factions, an overthrown monarchy threatening a resurrection, traitors in every sphere of activity—how can a single brain grasp all these complications and control these wild, explosive forces?

Nor ought we to be indifferent or unsympathetic toward that spokesman of ours in the White House. He, too, like another Atlas, is carrying a world upon his shoulders. Was ever any other man burdened with such momentous responsibilities? More than any other single individual even among the titanic figures of the world war the destinies of the race are in his hands. To him the nations look as children to a father and as a tribe to its chief to voice the ideals and purposes of the allies; to provide the sinews of war; to maintain hope; to furnish inspiration and vision.

We cannot comprehend a life like that. We cannot see how a man gets time for his multitudinous duties. We cannot understand how he is able to grasp all the aspects of those complicated questions, by any single one of which our own intelligence is confounded. We cannot see how he can sleep at nights!

"For I am weary and overwrought With too much toil, with too much care distraught. And with the iron crown of anguish crowned— Lay thy soft hand upon my brow and cheek, O powerful sleep."

If ever our sympathies went out to any man, it is to the President of these United States. To thwart his purposes in any way, to lay another burden on his shoulders, to tie his hands or feet, is cruelty and treason both.

Watch Your Kidneys

Inhalant fumes of turpentine and white lead often weakens the kidneys. That's one reason why so many painters have bad backs and sick kidneys. Exposure, frequent colds and chills and the strain of climbing up and down ladders helps start the trouble.

If your back aches, if sharp pains strike you in the back when stooping, lifting or working; if you have headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, if the urine is discolored or passages painful and scanty, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy so widely used and so well recommended by men in the painting trade. Here's Louisa testimony:

J. F. Wellman, painter, Main Cross St., Louisa, says: "My back bothered me all the time and hurt me when I stooped. My kidneys were irregular in action and I think the trouble was due to my work. After using Doan's Kidney Pills the symptoms disappeared. My back became strong and my kidneys again acted regularly."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Wellman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

War of World Conquest

REPORT MADE BY DEWEY TO NAVY DEPARTMENT FIFTEEN YEARS AGO.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Prediction that Germany would wage a war for world conquest in about fifteen years was made to the late Admiral Dewey at Manila in 1898 by Capt. von Goetz of the German Imperial Navy. Senator Lewis to-day told the Senate.

Quoting a report from Admiral Dewey to the Navy Department, the Illinois Senator said that Von Goetz told the American naval officer that Germany would capture Paris as the first step to subjugating England. The taking of New York and Washington was to follow, in order that Germany might secure an enormous cash indemnity.

The wiping out of the Monroe Doctrine and the control of South America by Germany also were predicted by the German officer, declared Senator Lewis, who was discussing peace negotiations.

For some reason the Government had not given the report wide circulation, Senator Lewis continued, but in the face of it now, "any Senator who speaks more or elsewhere against any measure of his country lends himself to the enemy."

Characterizing the German reply to Pope Benedict's peace note as "Prussian peace hypocrisy," and an affront both to the Pope and President Wilson, Senator Lewis scored what he termed "ingratitude in patriotism" and those who argue against the war.

"The country guarantees free speech to every American," the speaker said, "but that man who uses free speech against America is not the American to whom free speech is guaranteed. In this country there can be no free speech to any man to destroy the freedom of his fellowman. There can never be liberty of speech to an American citizen to destroy the liberty of the American nation."

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

Tells how to loosen a tender corn or callous so it lifts out without pain.

You reckless men and women who are plagued with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from "boesjaw" or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn or callous the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn or callous, root and all, lifts off with the fingers.

Freezone dries the moment it is applied, and simply shrivels the corn or callous without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but will positively rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or hardened callous. If your druggist hasn't any freezone he can get it at any wholesale drug house for you.

REPORT SHOWS GERMANY ABUSED U. S. FRIENDSHIP

Deadly Germs and Bombs Placed in American Consulate at Bucharest.

PLOTTED TO KILL ANIMALS

Another of Series of Lane's Disclosures of Teuton Intrigue Against This Government—Plot
Admitted.

Washington, Sept. 25.—How Germany "shamefully abused and exploited" the protection of the United States by secreting in the German legation at Bucharest, after the American government had taken charge of Germany's affairs at the Roumanian capital, quantities of powerful explosives for bomb plots and deadly microbes, with instructions for their use in destroying horses and cattle, was revealed by Secretary Lansing.

The latest story is told in a report to the state department from William Whiting Andrews, secretary of the legation at Bucharest, and a letter from Foreign Minister Porumbanu of Roumania.

Plot is Admitted.

Mr. Andrews' report says: "Upon my return from the examination, which resulted in the discovery of the explosives and of the box of microbes, both of which the legation servants admitted having placed in the garden, the former confidential agent of the German minister, Doctor Bernhardt, who had been left with the legation at the German minister's request, to assist in the care of German interests, admitted his knowledge of the explosives placed in the garden; told me that more were in the garden than had been found; that a still larger quantity had been buried in the house of the legation, and that still worse things than this box of microbes were contained in the legation, and indicated that they would have been found even in the cabinets of drawers which I had sealed.

"Doctor Bernhardt also stated that all these objects had been brought to the German legation after our legation had accepted the protection of German interests, which agreed with the statement of the servants. A similar confession was made to the minister by this man.

U. S. Protection Abused.

"The protection of the United States was in this manner shamefully abused and exploited. In this instance at least, the German government cannot have recourse to its usual system of denial."

Fifty-one boxes were taken from the ground in the garden. Fifty of them contained each a cartridge filled with trinitrotoluene saturated with mononitrotoluene, among the most powerful explosives known, one-fifth of each of one being sufficient to tear up a railroad track. In the other box were bottles of liquid found to be cultivations of the microbes of anthrax and glanders. It bore a seal showing it came from the German consulate at Kronstadt, Hungary. Inside was found a typewritten note in German, saying:

"Inclosed four phials for horses and four for cattle. To be introduced, if possible, directly into the animals' throats; if not, into their fodder. Please make a little report on the success obtained there; in case of good results the presence of Mr. Kostoff for one day here would be desirable."

Foreign Minister Porumbanu accompanied this letter with documents to prove the origin of the boxes and their contents.

The Change In Edwin LeRoy

By ETHEL HOLMES

Edwin LeRoy was not an especially spiritual man, though he was what may be termed a thoughtful one. He was not given to philosophic speculations, nor was he of a devotional nature. If he had any special intellectual predilection it was for science, though even in this he read only what was written for popular instruction. Circumstances had compelled him to assist himself on several occasions, and this had given him a reputation for being combative.

One day—rather, one moment—a great change came over him. He was walking on a road and met a girl. He looked at her; she looked at him. She lowered her eyes, but before she did so some vague internal announcement was made in both that they were mates. LeRoy turned and joined her. There was no conventional introduction. They walked on together.

The meeting between Edwin LeRoy and Camilla Heald was a spiritual as well as a physical one. The two souls became one at the moment of meeting. A year after their marriage, Camilla died. LeRoy laid away his earthly partner with no great show of feeling. He did not weep at her grave. To him she had not been buried. She had not wholly departed from him. He was denied material communication with her, but there was a spiritual unity between them that could not be broken.

One day LeRoy was strolling about in his garden. He seemed to be talking to his flowers, but he was communing with the spirit of his wife. A man entered and hurried toward him. "Sir," said the stranger, "I loved a woman whom, I have been told, you married. Though she did not love me, I loved and still love her. I am told that she is dead. I desire to visit her grave. Will you tell me where you have buried her?"

"I have not buried her."

The writer looked at LeRoy wonderingly. "That receptacle," continued LeRoy, "that conveyance, that machine of flesh which is intended to hold a soul during a brief period of preparation for a superior existence, has been buried. You will find it in the churchyard a short distance up the road."

Having given this information, LeRoy turned again to his flowers. The fact that another had loved his wife did not seem either to interest or move him. This indication that he was so sure that his dead wife had belonged to him alone antagonized the visitor.

"Had I met Camilla," said the latter, "a few months before you found her the result might have been different."

"No," said LeRoy, "it would not." "Why are you so sure of that?" "Because Camilla was destined for a perfect union. She could never have accepted any other."

There was something irritating to the stranger in this complacent view of LeRoy's with reference to the woman who had refused the one and mated with the other. While the widower remained unruffled, the disheartened lover waxed warm with smoldering anger.

"Your love for her was human," he said. "You possessed her in the flesh. Now she is mine. Some day I will go to her."

"Many are going, but who shall meet in the infinite we cannot know while here."

"In the infinite there is no marriage. Camilla will be to me at least as much as she will be to you."

"She will not be to you what she has been to me."

This reference to the fact that the woman he had loved had been in the flesh possessed by his rival caused the stranger to lose his equanimity.

"You lie," he said.

LeRoy stooped to pick a flower.

"Did you hear me?" said the other angrily. "I say you lie."

"If you wish to quarrel with me," said LeRoy, rising and at the same time inhaling the perfume of the flower he had plucked, "you will have to select some other cause. There can be no quarrel in which the dead is concerned."

The man stood looking at LeRoy in a sort of confused wonder. This last word stunned him.

"Pardon," he said, "I have not been used to living in this world wherein you live. I am a mortal; you seem to have placed your foot on the threshold of the infinite."

"I have not placed it there; she is drawing me. She is the magnet, I the needle. Where she is there I point."

"I beg that you will excuse this unwarranted intrusion; it was not intended as such when I came here."

"Forgive my want of attention to your wish. Come; I will show you the grave."

The two walked in silence to the churchyard, and LeRoy led the way among the tombs, some of pure, fresh hewn marble, others crumbling and brown with age, and stopped at one on which was inscribed, "The Former Casket of a Soul."

The stranger removed his hat and bent reverently beside the grave. LeRoy stood with folded arms and head covered.

"Do you not revere this spot?" asked the stranger.

"No."

"We differ. Down there lies the woman I loved."

LeRoy removed his hat and, raising his eyes to the blue heavens, said reverently:

"Ouz there is the woman I love."

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP, LAWRENCE COUNTY, OHIO

Farm Number Thirteen:

This land is practically all in second growth timber for hill land it lays much better than Boyd, Lawrence or Greenup-co., Kentucky lands. Ninety per cent of this land can be run over with a mowing machine. None of these farms has any improvements. These offers should be especially attractive to the man who wants to secure himself a farm of his own and especially so if he has a family of boys to help him clean it up and put it in a producing condition. This land will produce well, and the best evidence of it is to see the farms with their nice houses and barns adjoining it and in the same neighborhood.

On all the above named farms two Oil and Gas and Road ways shown on Company's Map are reserved; it being the purpose and intention of the Company that every farm has an outlet to the main Pike or Road.

Good Neighbors:—Every farm surrounding our property is highly improved, with good homes and barns, and the owners are kind, courteous and neighborly.

Good Schools:—No child under the law is required to walk over one and a half miles. If school is farther away the School Board must provide teams to haul the children to school.

Good Churches:—Of different denominations, located not farther than two miles from any part of our property.

Fine Roads:—Well macadamized and on good grades. Fourteen miles from Bloom Switch Station to the paved streets of Portsmouth, Ohio, over a fine state pike.

Two Railroads:—Baltimore and Ohio Railway and Toledo and Ironton Railway. No farms except No. 13 further than two miles from a railway station.

You might as well have the use of that building you are planning—there is nothing to be gained by waiting. There is no prospect of prices going down for some time after the war is over. Go ahead and let your contracts.

When it comes to the roof you can make a real saving, and get a better roof by specifying

Certain-teed

Roofing

CERTAIN-TEED is not cheaper because the quality is lower, but because it is a less expensive roofing to manufacture. It is better, not only because it is cheaper, but also because it is light weight, weather-tight, clean, sanitary, fire-retardant and costs practically nothing to maintain.

It is now recognized as the preferable type of roofing for office buildings, factories, hotels, stores, warehouses, garages, farm buildings etc., where durability is necessary.

CERTAIN-TEED is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to thickness (1, 2 or 3 ply).

There are many roll roofings on the market, but only one CERTAIN-TEED. It pays to get the best. It costs no more to lay a CERTAIN-TEED roof than it does to lay a poor roof, but there is a vast difference in the wear. You can't tell the quality of a roofing by looks or feel. Your only safety is the label. Be sure that it is CERTAIN-TEED—then you are certain of quality and guaranteed satisfaction.

Certain-teed Slate-Surfaced Asphalt Shingles are supplanting wood and slate shingles for residences. They cost less, are just as good looking, wear better, won't fall off, buckle or split. They are fire-retardant, and do not have to be painted or stained.

Certain-teed Paints and Varnishes are the best quality paint materials, ground and mixed with mechanical accuracy. Made for all uses and in all colors. With paint, as with roofing, the name CERTAIN-TEED is a guarantee of quality and satisfaction.

on the ground the rich, dark paw-paw may be found. The Indian corn takes on a russet hue and soon will stand in shocks. Old Sol is on his journey south, he's passed the equinox. But still he sends his golden rays to brighten these mild September days. Oh, autumn is a dandy way up here on Big Sandy.

The corn crop in our immediate community is good, but reports from the creeks are to the effect that the crop will be short in many places.

Cattle seem to be plentiful in all this part of the country, on John's creek, Daniels creek and Rockcastle.

Many of our people are engaged in conserving food for future use. Apples are plentiful.

Cabbage is being made into kraut, but not for the Kaiser.

Miss Mary Luck gave an old fashioned lemon string to a party of her little friends one night last week.

Dr. W. L. Hatcher and family have gone to St. Louis to spend a winter.

Miss Adelaide Smirley spent Saturday and Sunday with friends at Cliff.
